

DAMAGE DONE BY VANDALS MONUMENTS WORTH $25,000 TO REPLACE DESTROYED.

Regiment of U. S. Cavalry Should Patrol Park Day and Night.

Gettysburg was unexpressibly shocked by the outrage of a vandal last week. Never in the history of this town from the day when the National Cemetery was dedicated and this battlefield became the abiding place of hundreds of memorials has there been any outrage on the field such as overwhelmed us last week. There have been occasional single acts of vandalism which could be attributed to accidental mischief of boys but the wreck of last week was deliberate work.

It is said that no similar piece of vandalism is known in the history of the world. It is not to be compared to the slashing out of celebrated paintings from their frames in European art galleries, for in those cases the despoiler took the canvasses for the gain to be derived. Great conquerors have ransacked vanquished lands to carry off art treasures to adorn their own land and cities, but not to destroy the treasures. But in the present case nine monuments have been damaged and some of them irreparably ruined by a vandal for no other purpose than to destroy.

It is hard to account for a state of moral depravity which could prompt a man to commit such an outrage in the face of the preparations for the great celebration of the battle, when the sight of these mutilated memorials would deeply wound the old veterans and visitors. One who would so desecrate the sacred field where the fate of America was decided is this town's worst enemy, and deserves to be hunted out with large rewards and the secret service work of the government.

This catastrophe has demonstrated another thing, that this great battlefield park of several thousand acres, and over 500 monuments and memorials must be guarded day and night and that the natural guardians for the field are a troop or a regiment of United States Cavalry. The park is under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of War and the cavalry are in the service of the United States with their pay going on all the time whether here or elsewhere. Barracks could be erected here and sufficient cavalry supported here to give mounted patrol here day and night, and their very presence would prevent the repetition of any similar act of vandalism. This need not interfere with the work of the Battlefield Commissioners here and their force of guards and employees who are needed to do the necessary work of repairing and keeping the park in order. We commend to the commissioners that they recommend to the Secretary of War that several troops or a regiment of cavalry be maintained here for an adequate mounted patrol of the park. This would be in line with the original designs of many who helped to plan this memorial field.

The work of the vandal was discovered on Tuesday afternoon and the extent of his destruction came to light on Wednesday, only after the greater part of the battlefield in and around the Round Top had been visited and inspected by Colonel E. B. Cope, the wreck of monuments growing from the three known on Tuesday evening to the nine discovered next day.

The damaged monuments are the Fifth Corps Headquarters marker and the Thirty-Seventh Massachusetts in the grove north of the new Sedgwick monument on Sykes' Avenue, the Ninety-Sixth Pennsylvania Regiment, the Fortieth New York and Sixth New Jersey in the Valley of Death and the Grant Vermont Brigade memorial of a lion, Forty-Ninth Pennsylvania, Sixth Maine and Fifth Wisconsin located on Howe Avenue back of Big Round Top on avenue running across the Taneytown road. The wreckage looks like the work of a single individual either coming into town from the Taneytown road or going out, being alone one route the party could have taken.

That the destruction was not a craze of a relic hunter is evident from the fact that the broken pieces were not carried away, but littered the ground. Portions of stone, gun barrels, fragments of stone shoes and peaks of the stone caps that covered the heads of the stone figures, as well as stone noses and ears and portions of stone hands were scattered about the bases of the statues. The first object of the vandal's hand was a large stone cross which marks the position of the Fifth Army Corps on the second day of the battle. The upright of the cross was capped by a handsome granite cone, the whole design having presented a beautiful appearance as it fronted Sykes' avenue from its position in a small boulder-strewn tract of woodland. Today the cone lies in fragments on the ground, and jagged pieces of splintered rock protrude from where it was on the top of the upright of the cross, while the cross itself has been chipped at every corner except in the front, and the pieces of granite lie at its base. The monument itself is ruined, and it stands there a sort of parody on the subject it was erected to commemorate.

About 20 yards from the mutilated cross was a beautiful 8-foot granite monument, simulating the tall stump of a tree. It marks the spot of the Thirty-Seventh Massachusetts Regiment, of the Second Brigade, Third Division, as it was on the second day's battle. This monument is badly damaged, every corner and every ornament that the hammer could come in contact with having been knocked off, the pieces lying on the ground.

It is not, however, until one proceeds several hundred rods further, getting away from this particular spot and approaching the Valley of Death, that the worst examples of vandalism are seen. On the Wheatfield road is a handsome monument, the design being a recumbent soldier, lying face downward on top of a massive granite base, his gun leveled before him and his eye taking aim, a design that was the pride of the Ninety-sixth Pennsylvania Regiment, the survivors of which erected the memorial with their own money. It was a Schuylkill county regiment, and the design of the figure was executed by a Pottsville sculptor (A. Zellok), and the stone furnished and the work of erecting done by a Pottsville granite firm—the F. Collins Granite Works. The monument stands in the Valley of Death, where the Schuylkill county regiment lost so heavily. The figure of the soldier on the granite block was modeled, it is said, after that of an Irish miner, the idea of the sculptor being to make it as nearly as possible typical of the race of workers in the coal regions, many of whom fought in the cause of the Union. But the figure is no longer a thing pleasant to look upon. The soldier's nose has been knocked off completely, the peak of his cap is gone, his broad left foot lies on the ground, and his stone gun has been shattered from muzzle to butt, and the pieces were found scattered about the monument's base.

Despite the destruction of the features of the face by the loss of the nose, the facial resemblance to the Irish race, which the sculptor intended to center in the expression, is still there, showing with remarkable distinctness. A strange thing about the systematic mutilation of the monuments is the fact that none of the inscriptions on the faces of the granite nor on the bronze tablets have been disturbed. The tablets are unmarred and undented. The destroying hand turns from the Ninety-Sixth Regiment and proceeds down the Valley of Death to the handsome memorial of the Fortieth New York, known as the Mozart Regiment, as it was largely composed of German musicians, or rather of members of the Mozart Musical Society of New York. The design on top of the granite block here was that of a soldier lying on a rock, with leveled gun taking aim. The hammer was freely employed in its destructive work here. The peak of the cap, the chin and nose of the figure, the right foot, part of knapsack and the granite design of the gun were all broken off. Companies B, G, H and K of this regiment were from Massachusetts.

The shaft of the Sixth New Jersey not far away was damaged by having the corners chipped off in a dozen places. The Grant Vermont Brigade monument of the lion was mutilated by being chipped and the whole lower jaw of the lion being knocked off and tail snapped. The other monuments on Howe Avenue, Forty-Ninth Pennsylvania, Sixth Maine and Fifth Wisconsin were of square designs and the damage to them consisted of chipped corners and edges.

Colonel Cope at each monument gathered up all the broken fragments and it is believed that the monuments can be repaired in some shape with cement so that their horrible mutilated condition will not be so apparent during the anniversary celebration. There is not time before this event to replace them with entirely new work, but eventually it will be up to the United States government to replace all these memorials with new ones for the government is the custodian.

There is no clue to the identity of the vandal. The commission have been authorized to offer a reward of One Hundred Dollars for information that will lead to the detection of the vandals who marred the monuments on the battlefield. This reward to be effective should be ten to fifty times larger. The better way would be to put the Secret Service men on the job as quickly as possible who by the process of elimination might reach a suspicion point of view and then have the goings and comings of all those covering the period in which the damage was done carefully followed. Or if there were any strangers in the neighborhood this could be ferreted out. The notion that it was done by a drunken man does not look plausible as the way Plum Run had to be crossed and the distance covered and the work that was done would eliminate any such conclusion. The only rational conclusion is that the work was that of a mental and moral defective, one who might entertain an imagined grievance and take revenge in some almost insane way.

The commissioners have put on a number of extra guards and will make every effort in their power to prevent any further depredation. The Yellowstone National Park has its detail of cavalry on duty to prevent depredations in that great park of natural beauty. At Gettysburg where the heroism and patriotism of the country is being preserved in a great national park to point the finger for all time to the peace and union of the country wrought here, a regiment of cavalry can not be too quickly sent to preserve the field inviolate from the outrage of depraved vandals.

Copied Skelly Post No. 9, G. A. R. at a meeting Monday evening, March 10, passed the following resolution: Resolved, That as members of Copied Skelly Post, No. 9, Department of Pennsylvania, Grand Army of the Republic, located at Gettysburg, Pa., we express our indignation and horror of the vandalism committed by the person or persons who, during the past week, mutilated a number of the finest monuments in the National Park here.

Hon. Wm. H. Tipton has added $50 to the reward of $100 already offered for information that will lead to the arrest of the party or parties who defaced any or all of the monuments on the field. While such public spiritedness is most commendable, it should be made unnecessary by an adequate reward from National or State authorities or both.

Battle Picture Building Going Up.

The Battle Picture Building is looming up large on East Cemetery Hill on the O'Neal lot adjoining the reservoir. The steel frame can be seen from every part of the country and will be one of the most commanding objects on the field. The lines of the big circular building are graceful and when the steel and tile structure is completed will present a handsome appearance.

It will interest our own citizens to know that Albert J. Hahne, leading merchant of Newark, N. J., owner of a store building many stories high and covering an entire block, and employing over two thousand employees in the busiest emporium of that city, is the man behind the Battle Picture Building. He owns the original painting of the Battle of Gettysburg, painted by Paul Philippoteaux. Mr. Hahne will pay for the structure in Gettysburg in which it will be housed. Mr. Hahne made his first trip to Gettysburg on last Saturday with his attorney, Geo. H. Peirce of Newark. They met here Mr. Murphy of the firm of architects of Murphy & Ormstead of Washington, and A. Clinton Smith and Homer T. Booth of the Cassidy Construction Co. of Washington, who are the contractors of the building. The structure was looked over. Everyone was pleased with the progress of the work.

Weather permitting a big gang of workmen will go on the laying of the tile this week and the building will be rushed to a finish by early part of April. Gettysburg is to be congratulated that Albert J. Hahne has become interested in this undertaking.

Mr. Hahne bought the Philippoteaux picture about four years ago. The picture had to be sold to close up an estate. Certain Frenchmen were making an effort to have the picture bought and sent back to Paris. Mr. Hahne felt there should be enough patriotism to keep this picture of the greatest battle on American soil in this country. The picture had been in a fire and Mr. Hahne finally sent men and had to spend $200 to remove picture to a common where it could be unwrapped. It was discovered that the fire had only eaten part way through the roll of canvas in which it was wrapped and the picture was unharmed. The picture was then bought and first exhibited in Mr. Hahne's big store, later in an armory in New York, then in a Baltimore armory, and last in the Pension Office in Washington.

While in latter city C. O. Howard, a son of Gen. O. O. Howard, and an employee in the Pension office, saw the picture and visiting Mr. Hahne succeeded in getting the money put in his hands for the erection of a building at Gettysburg. The report of the auditor made last week following the receivership found that over $7000 of the money advanced by Mr. Hahne for the building was not used for that purpose and was not available when needed. This condition brought about the receivership of the old company and closing out of same. Mr. Hahne has not only assumed all losses of innocent parties in the old company, but has advanced all money needed to complete the building, being determined that the great picture shall be hung in the building now being erected in this place.

Brodbeck has been notified that the Navy Department has directed the convening of the board of naval officers on Monday, July 14, for the purpose of conducting a competitive examination for young men between the ages of 21 and 27, inclusive, to establish a list of eligibles from which to fill vacancies in the grade of second lieutenant in the United States Marine Corps. Once an appointment is obtained the position is good for life, on good behavior, with an opportunity for promotion to the highest grade in the service. ### WANTED—A SIGNIFICANCE

For the Great Celebration of the Battle.

Governor John K. Tener of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and Gentlemen of the Commission of the Fifty-fifth Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg:

The citizens of Gettysburg extend to you every encouragement in their power toward your work of reorganizing your commission and making adequate preparations for the great celebration, less than four months ahead. You will have their hearty co-operation in all your undertakings and their best hopes to make of the event a great success. Your consideration is invited to the significance wanted for the occasion.

The Nation and States have appropriated more than three-quarters of a million dollars for the celebration and the total public money spent will not doubt exceed a million dollars. Shall this great sum be spent and no memorial of the occasion remain to tell the thought and sentiment of the event? The reasons for the celebration are not the onerous details you are working out, nor the coming together of thousands of veterans of the Blue and Gray, nor the words of wisdom that will go on. The celebration must give a thought that will endure and there is none other worth while but peace and national unity. It is too late to complete any memorial not too late to plan one, announcing it to the world or perhaps laying the cornerstone thereof. There are a number of peace and unity memorials that could be authorized by the Legislature and added to by national legislation and that of sister States. Permit the suggestion of three such memorials. Any one of these would be appropriate.

jected from Harrisburg to Gettysburg, on a magnitude akin to that proposed for the Lincoln Way, and carried to the Maryland line.

2. A great amphitheater might be erected in Gettysburg in which battle flags and trophies of war could be preserved and where gatherings here could give utterance to thoughts of peace and unity.

3. The cornerstone of a great building in connection with Gettysburg College might be authorized in which trophies of war could be preserved and where a department of American History and Science of Peace might be located and provision made for State aid to cover instruction in such departments. In a college at Gettysburg the greatest department should be one of history pointing the significance of events. A great building on college grounds could be cared for by the college authorities. The institution gave of their men and of mercy fifty years ago and there would be a special appropriateness in such a memorial now.

East Berlin Trolley Co.

The officers of the East Berlin Trolley Company as recently organized are as follows: Peter C. Smith, President; W. G. Leas, Vice President; Dr. Eugene Elgin, Secretary; Geo. F. Jacobs, Assistant Secretary; Wm. Himes, Corresponding Secretary; Joseph Naylor, Treasurer. The directors are P. C. Smith, W. G. Leas, Dr. Elgin, G. F. Jacobs, Geo. Baublitz, East Berlin, Wm. Himes, New Oxford, A. M. Jacobs, Altoona, Fredrick Altland and Pierce Stambaugh, Bigmouth, Joseph Naylor and Franklin P. Lauer, Weigeltown.

The William Ryssel Smith Company, surveyors, of York, will make two surveys and the most desirable route will be chosen. Upon the completion of the preliminary work necessary for an estimate of the cost of building the road, stock subscription lists will be circulated through the community traversed by road for the purpose of raising the necessary capital. According to expressions in East Berlin for such a road, it is expected that a very large part of the capital can be raised locally. This road would run through one of the richest and most thickly settled portions of York county, and besides the convenience to the citizens, should prove a profitable investment.

THE NEW IDEA IN BUSINESS

BUSINESS IN FINAL ANALYSIS IS SERVICE.

He Profits Most Who Serves Best
Whether Individual or Institution

James D. Keaton, an expert in efficiency as applied to factory, office and sales department, made a remarkable speech recently in Harrisburg and summed up the situation by declaring that "business in the final analysis is service and he profits most who serves best, whether individual or institution." Every man in business for himself or others can ponder this new wisdom with profit.

"Through the commercial world the one great cry that is going up is the demand for higher efficiency, for men who can do things and do things on a bigger and better scale to all departments of business.

"Efficiency is the ability to produce the maximum of results with the least waste of time, energy, money. An executive may have the best of plans, the financial department may have ample capital, the manufacturing department may have the most thorough equipment and the sales department may have men covering every part of the territory, but unless there is efficiency in each and every department, the results are not satisfactory.

"That which is being sold by any institution is the service of its employees, the combined, intelligent effort, the product of thoughts and feelings expressed in action.

"The tremendous competition of the day, the complicated activities of the times, demand speedy results, and since employers find it practically impossible to employ men and women of sufficient development to be the most efficient, it is a problem which they must meet and solve. The solution of it is educational plans in which they, the employers, must become interested and in which they must take part.

"The service idea is the biggest idea in connection with business, and if the customer gets it the business is easily secured."

Know Your Fellowman

"Coming to the next step, Man—know your fellowman. Every business man needs to know more about human nature because that is what he deals with constantly. Most men are satisfied with their ability to size up men, but they make more mistakes than they should. Science has made it possible during the last few years to know how to size up men as a mechanic would size up a piece of machinery. There are certain definite things which we can see in a man which reveal his characteristics, if we know how to look for these things. My time is too short to permit me to go in to this phase of the subject to any extent, but herein lies a wonderful field for study by the business man which would give him much added power in his dealings with men. While we have been busily engaged in our various activities, some of the greatest minds in the world have been making an exhaustive study of the book of human nature, getting data, comparing thousands of cases, and finally they will prevent our making many mistakes."

Continuing he said:

"The value of any man can be measured by the degree of supervision he requires. The more he has to be told what to do, checked up and guided, the less he is worth. Supervision is made necessary on account of errors of omission and commission, failure to do that which he should do and making mistakes in the things done. These errors make supervision necessary and add a tremendous and wasteful expense to any business.

"Each error of omission or commission can be traced to one or more of some sixty negatives that exist in man, and the only remedy is to eliminate these negatives by building up the corresponding positives.

"In nature we find the great dual law of opposites; for instance, we see darkness as a negative and light positive we see cold the negative, heat the positive. And in man we find the negative of heedlessness and the positive of observation; the negative of exaltation, the positive of concentration; the negative of injudiciousness, the positive of judgment; the negative of dullness, the positive of imagination. The heedless man does not take in ideas, consequently his brain is inactive. The leading psychologists tell us that the average man is using only ten per cent of his brain cells in his daily work and only one-fourth of his lung capacity, and therein lies a cause of inefficiency. The only source through which we can gain knowledge is through the five physical senses of seeing, hearing, feeling, tasting and smelling, because these are the only means by which knowledge can come into the mind, and if these are dull and undeveloped, the avenues for acquiring knowledge are partly closed to the mind.

"An employer of a manufacturing plant told me recently that the negative of forgetfulness had cost his concern last year over $50,000 and, some of you employers may recall wherein that negative has cost you more than that. It costs thousands of lives every year, it costs millions of dollars—this negative of 'I forgot.' Scattered is a negative which causes the thoughts of the mind at times to run around in rings, at times to run off at a tangent. "Concentration will enable men to bore holes in things, to get results. Dullness is a negative which means slow death. A stimulated imagination results in ideas, in plans, in dreams of achievement, in pictures of work which lead on and on to success.

"Imagination is the creative, the planning part of the mind, and unless it is active, unless it is constantly on the job, we become dull, apathetic, listless, and we gradually drop down and out. As we cultivate observation, concentration, reason, judgment, imagination, etc., it results in more ability.

"But we must not stop there, because a man can be able and be a criminal. Therefore we must go further. So let us consider the feelings—or soul side of man. First, I will mention the negatives of doubt, apathy, hate, listlessness. Doubt has killed more successes than all the armies of the world have killed men.

"Imagination is the creative, the planning part of the mind, and unless it is active, unless it is constantly on the job, we become dull, apathetic, listless, and we gradually drop down and out. As we cultivate observation, concentration, reason, judgment, imagination, etc., it results in more ability.

"But we must not stop there, because a man can be able and be a criminal. Therefore we must go further. So let us consider the feelings—or soul side of man. First, I will mention the negatives of doubt, apathy, hate, listlessness. Doubt has killed more successes than all the armies of the world have killed men. Doubting oneself, doubting the firm, doubting the goods or the service handled, doubting the ability to sell; doubt is the spectre which covers the very life of a man in the shroud of despair and failure. Faith that I can, faith in myself, faith in people, faith in my work, faith in what the future will bring to me is a commercial asset of you faith shall it be done unto you."

"Apathy is one of the worst negatives. The man who has allowed this negative to control him has the 'don't care' habit, and he belongs to the 'what's the use' class. He is not even a 'going-to-be,' he is simply a 'waster.' The man of ambition has something to work on, the man of ambition climbs the ladder of success round by round from the bottom to the top, and then calls out for more ladder.

"The negative of hate is the cause of a tremendous amount of waste, of lost motion, because it results in discontent, in pessimism, it results in discontent and disloyalty. But the man who develops love is the man who is kind, who is courteous, who is cheerful, who has sunshine pervading his personality. And this, in turn, will beget enthusiasm, and the man of enthusiasm builds a fire within himself that pervades all those who come in contact with him. Enthusiasm begets enthusiasm and enthusiasm begets success. As we cultivate the qualities of love, faith, ambition and enthusiasm, we have a man of Reliability.

"We must not stop there. A man may have Ability and Reliability and yet have a weak body. He may have the negatives of weakness, of sickness and laziness. He must cultivate health, industry, energy. Business life is not a play ground, it is a battle ground, where men get into the game and stay in the game to a finish and a man needs more physical endurance. If you business men would only stop to consider the commercial asset of the physical body, as well as the mentality, and would see to it that your employees take more interest in bringing out the vital physical energy you would see it result not only in happier people but in the golden flow of dollars into your coffers."

"And now we have a man of Ability, Reliability and Endurance, but if we leave him here we will have an incomplete man. We must look now, finally, to the will power. First, I will call your attention to the three negatives of indecision, inertia and vacillation. Lots of men can never decide just what to do. They would like to do this or do that or the other, but they cannot make up their minds what to do. They lack the power of decision. Some men may decide what to do but they do not turn on the steam, they do not turn on the power. They suffer from inertia. This negative—inertia or laziness—has destroyed the dreams of the youth, told him that success was the result of luck or chance; it caused him to look for the easy places; it caused him to busy himself with trifles; it caused him to refuse to expand his mind in reading and study; it caused him to neglect the bodily forces and consider physical culture a fad; it caused him to blame others for not having a chance; it caused him to take things easy and just drift, drift along.

"The man of initiative springs into action, he is eager for the fray, he wants results. But yet he may decide and start and then falter, because he vacillates, therefore he must cultivate the great positive of persistence. The man who decides, who starts and who persists, is the man who wins. And the result of these positives is Action, the will power that is the servant of man.

"And now show me a man of Ability, Reliability, Endurance and Action and I will show you a success. And these four words give you the scale of every man. You employers should size up your employees by that standard. Take the first letters of the four words and they spell AREA—there's the area of the man.

"And listen, according to the area of your man is his power, power to acquire and use knowledge. He can only do in proportion to what he knows. In every human being there is unlimited opportunity for development. Every man possesses both the positive and negative side. I have only mentioned a few qualities, but enough to illustrate. We can strengthen them, build up the positives which give us power, and the negatives disappear as darkness goes when the light is turned on.

"As the positives are developed results come, efficient results. And efficiency, as was said, is the maximum of results with the minimum of effort. Herein lies the true solution of the problem, and until employers and employees truly awaken to these truths and get busy with this problem there will be a tremendous waste motion in institutions and in the lives of people."

Course of Road Bond Legislation.

When the State Senate reconvenes next week it is expected that an effort will be made to set going the $50,000,000 good roads constitutional amendment resolution, which has been favorably reported from committee and is ready for action.

Confirmation of the appointment of State Highway Commissioner E. M. Bigelow by the Senate is believed to have opened the way for consideration of the amendment proposition, whose friends refrained from pushing it during the period in which any uncertainty as to the future management of the Highway department might have been used against it. All this is now out of the way, and there is believed to be plain sailing for the amendment. Its passage by the Senate is considered as assured, and it will then be sent over to the House, where the friends of good roads will rally to its support.

It appears probable now that no attempt will be made to secure a special election for submitting this proposed amendment to the people, but that it will be allowed to await the regular election next November, when the voters will have an opportunity to say whether or not the building of main State highways throughout Pennsylvania shall be financed in an adequate manner.

This brings up the question of the necessary enabling legislation. The amendment to the constitution would merely permit the State to issue bonds for highway improvement. Specific authority for such an issue, with provisions for limiting the amounts to be put out each year and for the setting aside of interest and sinking funds, must be granted by act of assembly. If this were to be put off until after the people had voted on the amendment, the necessary enabling legislation could not be enacted until the session of 1915, and the money for road building would not be available until two years from next June.

The impression is that the present legislature can pass the enabling acts, contingent on the amendment being approved by a majority of the voters next November. This would enable the State to prepare for the first issue of bonds during next fall and permit the launching of the road building program early in the spring of 1914. In fact, it might have the effect of starting the work on a big scale this year; for the reason that if assured of money from the bond issue in 1914, the department might be justified in using during 1913 the bulk of the money appropriated by the present legislature for the next two years.

Woman Suffrage in State Senate.

There has been a noticeable gain for the woman suffrage amendment during the past week. The numerous expressions of opinion in its favor from men high in the councils of all political parties, together with the friendly feeling toward it in their home communities, were not without their effect upon the State Senators and when they returned for last week's work the feeling that the resolution which calls for submission of the question to the voters of the State would go through became general.

There seems, for one thing, to be a more definite understanding of just what the Rockwell resolution means. For some reason an impression prevailed to a limited extent that the vote of the Legislature would decide the matter. This, of course, was not founded on facts. All that the resolution does is to submit the question to the next session of the Legislature. Then if it is adopted it will be submitted to the voters of the State for their decision in November, 1915. The voters themselves want this opportunity and hundreds of them have so informed their Senators.

The Senate adjourned for a full week to permit the Democrats to attend the inauguration, and reassembled March 10th. Following the reconvening of the body, there was a renewal of activity in behalf of the measure and attempts will be made to wipe out all opposition before March 18th, the date set for the hearing before the Senate Committee on Judiciary General.

Just say on a Postal Card: "Send me a copy of Stark Year Book for 1913." When writing, also tell us how many trees, shrubs, vines, etc., you will probably plant this season.

This Year Book is more than a mere catalogue of Stark nursery products, it is a practical, easy to understand text book for the guidance of the man who plants trees. Our own experience of nearly 100 years, the reports of experiment stations and the opinions of planters from all sections are condensed and reproduced for the benefit of busy people. Hundreds of varieties of apples, pears, peach, plum, cherry, apricot, quince, grape and all small fruits are described; weaknesses of each variety are pointed out and good points are explained. We feel that planters should know both.

Those interested in growing fruits or flowers or shrubs or shade trees will find this book of inestimable value; totally different from the average nurseryman's publications. ## CUP ASKED FOR.

The editor of the "Adams County Independent," the individual who has been selling the support of his paper for the high dollar to Republican or Democratic, and who has clubbed candidates when they did not come over with the money, said in his last issue "if we can but induce the 'Compiler' to say something our cup of joy shall be full." The cup needed is one to sober him to honesty and to square deal. David But Article may be another name according to the above quoted sentence for David But Also, who seems to be in the dress of his cup in talking about advertising more than one-third of the inches of advertising in his last issue were devoted to advertisements in York, Hanover, Harrisburg and Harney, all efforts to drive trade out of Adams county to other communities. The individual capable of making money out of politics like David But Also would not hesitate to get advertising by a similar method, in effect saying, that he will do his best to ruin home trade with all foreign advertisements he can get, for the high dollar, but also saying to the home trade save yourself from this destruction by advertising in his paper for the high dollar. Coming and going it is the money and not the value of advertising space. Well, now, David But Also, how's your cup?

Boys' and Girls' Corn Clubs.

Prof. H. Milton Roth, County Superintendent of Public Schools of Adams County is actively engaged in the work of organizing Boys' and Girls Corn Clubs. It is a most important work that should commend itself to every one interested in our schools. The following circular letter has been issued to Teachers, Directors and Citizens:

A meeting of representatives from all the agricultural organizations and many other interested persons, was held in the Law Library of the Court House, Gettysburg, on Saturday afternoon, March 1st, for the purpose of discussing the subject of Boys' Corn Clubs. A number of enthusiastic talks were given, after which, it was unanimously agreed to make plans to organize an Adams County Boys' and Girls' Agricultural League.

With the endorsement of that body I am forwarding the following circular:

We ask your earnest help and co-operation. The success of this movement very largely depends upon you. The purposes and plans of work for this league are quite similar to those of like clubs that have been organized in some of the states of the Middle West. This league will be the third (it is said) of the kind in Pennsylvania and to be a charter member of the league will be a great honor. The object is to interest the boys and girls in farm life—in things agricultural—and to better understand the beauty of country life and the worth, dignity and scientific advancement of agriculture. A great deal of time is spent in teaching children things which might be better spent in having them DO things, under wise supervision. There is nothing that counts so much in character building as that the boy or girl shall DO something that requires a sustained effort, something that may not be finished in a day, but requires time and planning, the final accomplishment of which is dependent somewhat upon influences outside of the boy's or girl's own resources.

The organization of this league for definite industrial work OUTSIDE THE SCHOOL can't help but arouse a general interest in rural communities in the subject of industrial education. It will awaken new interest and a practical intelligence in the affairs of the home and farm. It will reach parents and affect them in useful ways. Get the boys and girls interested, and the parents will have to be interested. Out of the experiments and activities of the boys and girls will come an organized body of knowledge in form available for the teacher and for use in the schools of the country.

Boys and girls under 21 years of age, in school or OUT OF SCHOOL, will be eligible to membership. There are no dues and no registration fee. Inclosed registration blanks stating name, postoffice address, school (if you are in school this year), age and designating the particular kind of work they care to undertake must be filled out by the applicants with pen and ink, and forwarded by them directly to the address of the undersigned. It is obligatory upon all applicants to undertake some special work that should be strictly his or her own.

No time will be taken from the regular work of the school as all designated work is done at HOME, more or less under the supervision of the parents, although other persons, including the teachers, are expected to interest themselves in the work. The variety of work of the league covers a wide range, including the raising of corn, potatoes, pumpkins, turnips, celery, cabbage and various other vegetables, flowers, cooking, ladding, sewing, needle work and household economies.

Arrangements will be made to have a county agricultural exhibit, at which time prizes will be awarded for CORN and probably for other products. Details will be fully worked out and explained in due time.

A meeting for all members who join the league before or on April 12th will be held on that day in the Court House Gettysburg, for the purpose of electing officers of the league and giving further information in regard to the work. All names received not later than April 12th will be designated as charter members. Duplicate lists of members, with post-office address and kind of work undertaken will be forwarded to the United States Department of Agriculture, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and Department of Agricultural Extension, State College, for suitable bulletins giving valuable information along desired lines.

Additional registration blanks and circulars will be furnished on application.

Don't fail to bring the matter before your pupils, patrons and citizens. All members and those who wish to join will not forget the meeting to be held in the Court House Gettysburg, April 12th, at 10 a. m.

Yours for national education, the home and better agriculture,

H. MILTON ROTH.

If you are interested you do not have to wait for blanks, write one over the following form and send it to Prof. Roth.

IRON SPRINGS.

Frank Watson, teacher of Furnace school, and William McClell, one of Hamilton township's school directors, attended the inauguration at Washington on March 4th.

John Staley moved from Mrs. Dr. Beaver's farm to his own home one day last week.

Ambrose Sanders who is a very successful farmer will move on the farm made vacant by John Staley.

Kicked by Young Horse.

On a recent cold morning ex-Prothonotary George Meckley of Tyrone township was leading a young horse to water, when the animal in playful mood, started to pitch and ruin. Mr. Meckley held on to the strap for some time, but it was finally drawn from his hand, and just as the animal had passed him it kicked out with both hind legs and one of the hoofs struck Mr. Meckley just below the right breast and the other hoof struck his left thigh, causing two very painful bruises but fortunately breaking no bones. Mr. Meckley, we are glad to state has recovered sufficiently to be able to go about attending to his business.

WANTED—Middle aged man and wife, want employment on farm or small property. Address COMPILER, P-25 21.

Hack and Auto License.

The Town Council at meeting on Monday evening passed a hack and automobile license ordinance. It is similar to ordinance passed some months ago and vetoed by the Burgess because of the legal situation at that time. The Superior Court had declared that State licensed autos could not be taxed by borough. A few days ago the Supreme Court decided that autos for hire could be compelled to pay a borough license. The passage of the new ordinance is expected to bring into the town treasury about $1000 a year, about sum old hack license produced.

Another Teacher.

The Gettysburg School Board at the regular meeting on last Thursday decided to divide the school of Miss Rachel Scott in the High street building. There are seventy children now in the school. Miss N. Blanche Stoops was elected the new teacher and will begin her duties on April 1st, at which time admissions are made to school, likely to increase the number of primary pupils. Next year the Directors expect to rearrange the schools so as to put from 1st to 5th grades in both the High St. building and Meade building.

—Perry J. Tawney, of the Compiler force, enjoyed an automobile trip to Hanover on Sunday.

—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pfeiffer have returned from Washington where they spent a week with relatives.

Why Salves Can't Cure Eczema

Since the old-fashioned theory of curing eczema through the blood has been given up by scientists, many different salves have been tried for skin diseases. But it has been found that these salves only clog the pores and cannot penetrate to the inner skin below the epidermis where the eczema germs are lodged. The quality of penetrating probably explains the tremendous success of the well known liquid eczema remedy, oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc., as compounded in D.D.D. Prescription.

We have sold other remedies for skin People's Drug Store.
